CARD

As the eve of our departure approaches, we take this opportunity to extend our heartiest thanks to the women of this city and its surrounding vicinity for the generous patronage accorded us in the past five years, and also for the phenomenal response to our sale now going on.

Saturday, October 29th, will be our last day here, and although we regret that we are compelled to leave—we feel gratified to know that a good reputation will be left behind us. You will remember that "square and upright dealings" was our policy — "courteous service" our watch word — "best values" our constant aim.

To our numerous friends, we made while here—we say "Au Revoir," and to you, good people, we bid good-bye.

To our brother merchants, we tender our highest esteem for the clean-cut and upright competitive methods employed by them. They have proven themselves to be a body of unselfish and liberal merchants of the highest type. — and we wish them success.

(Signed) SAMUEL A. OLEVSON.

Happy "Couple."
Charles and his adopted mother lived all alone, and they were the best kind of pals. One morning at breakfast Charles, who had just passed his seventh birthday, reached over and patted his mother's head, saying: "My, mum, I guess we're about the happiest couple in the world."

Reasonable Curiosity.
A writer in a contemporary complains of the unsatisfactory working of country telephones. We know of one impatient farmer, a new subscriber, who harnessed the old mare and drove down to the village to find out if its voice had come through yet.—London Punch.

Real Value of Work.
We may call our work humdrum and monotonous, may consider that it is not great enough to be worthy of our talents or our time, but whatever it may be, remember that we are not only making the work but being made by it.

The Use of Glass.
Glass is not altogether a modern requisite. It was used by the Romans in the time of Tiberius, and the ruins of Pompeii show windows of glass used before the year 79. In medieval times wonderful effects were created with glass.

Know His Lesson.
"Tell us something about Esau," directed the catechism teacher. Vincent, after clearing his throat, explained that "Esau was a man who wrote tables and sold the copyright to a publisher for a bottle of potash."—Detroit Varsity News.

One hundred aerial guns were used by the Americans in shelling the German ships.

There were eight declarations of war in August, 1914, involving Austria, Serbia, Germany, Russia, France, Britain and Japan.

Large quantities of ordinary household pots were bought for export to Germany at the recent annual fair auction in New York city.

The largest chrysanthemum yet grown in England, which has a circumference of thirty inches, was recently shown in London.

Blotting paper resulted from a search of paper being made accidentally without sizing. It made a fortune for the lucky man.
